Sellery, George Clarke. The Renaissance: Its nature and origins. Madison, Milwaukee, & London: University of Wisconsin Press, 1969. 16mo. [8 (2 blank)], 296 pp.

$8.00 Reprint. Originally published in 1950. On the back cover it states, "Here is the Renaissance at a glance, from the twelfth century to the fifteenth. Here are Dante, Chaucer, Machiavelli and Louis XI, the Medici, Villon, Pecock, Gutenberg, Columbus, Innocent III, Aquinas, Froissart, and the other great names of the Renaissance and late Middle Ages. The author considers one by one the politics of the period, its economics, literature, fine arts, its inventions, its works of philosophy, of criticism, and of history; he has selected the important figures and the significant events and weighed the conclusions of the scholars. He states as his considered opinion that the Renaissance was not a revolution caused by the rediscovery of the ancient classics but a stage in the natural evolution brought about by the energies and activities of vigorous people all over western Europe, people who, then as now, were trying to achieve a more abundant life." Paperback. Near fine. (5271)

$10.00 Stated ninth impression. Booth Tarkington's novella about the adventures of a gallant young Frenchman in early 18th-century England, begins like this: The young Frenchman did very well what he had planned to do. His guess that the Duke would cheat proved good. As the unshod half-dozen figures that had been standing noiselessly in the entryway stole softly into the shadows of the chamber, he leaned across the table and smilingly plucked a card out of the big Englishman's sleeve. "Merci, M. le Duc!" he laughed, rising and stepping back from the table. The Englishman cried out, "It means the dirty work of silencing you with my bare hands!" and came at him. "Do not move," said M. Beaucaire, so sharply that the other paused. "Observe behind you." The Englishman turned and saw what trap he had blundered into; then stood transfixed, impotent, alternately scarlet with rage and white with the vital shame of discovery . . . WHO could stop reading, there? The book is illustrated with a frontispiece and five plates, each with a protective tissue guard, by C. D. Williams. Publisher's gilt-stamped red cloth; soiled, front cover slightly bent, front hinge starting. A few pages lightly soiled and foxed. Gift inscription on the half-title. Good. (5459)
