◆ Being a great and accomplished Greek scholar did not prevent Stubbe (1632–76) from being shortsighted in the conduct of his life: His anti-Church and anti-university writings caused the dean of Christ Church college to end his career as a student and his preferment as a librarian in the Bodleian. Stubbe's decision to translate Godefroy's Achaica, seu, De causis interitus reipublicæ Achæorum was a reaffirmation of his continued scholarly bent despite having been ejected from the scholarly world.

Contentious Counterpoint — Contemporary Binding — A Librarian's Copy

Jewel, John. A defence of the apologie of the Church of Englande containinge an answeare to a certaine booke lately set foorth by M. Hardinge, and entitled, A confutation of&c. London: Henry Wykes, 1567. Folio (30.9 cm, 12.1"). [24], 742, [6] pp. (title-page in facsim., pp. 675/76 lacking; pagination erratic). $1675.00

◆ First edition of the Bishop of Salisbury's defense of his Apologie or Aunswer in Defence of the Church of England, which work was originally published in Latin as Apologia Ecclesiae Anglicanae. Written, like the first, to rebut Catholic attacks on Anglican theology, this second defense incorporates the texts of both Jewel's Apologia (in English) and Harding's Confutation.

The volume is printed in multiple typefaces including roman, Greek, and several different black-letter and italic fonts, with decorative capitals and extensive shouldernotes. Because the title-page is supplied here only in early inked facsimile, it is difficult to ascertain the specific issue with absolute certainty, but the fourth line of the title-page as given here is "foorth" rather than "foorth." All early issues are uncommon; ESTC, OCLC, and NUC Pre-1956 find only ten U.S. holdings of the "foorth" variant.

Binding: Contemporary calf over heavy boards, panelled and framed in blind with floral, geometric, and armorial blind-tooling within panels; a pencilled note on the front free endpaper says, "Richardson binding." There once were clasps, now lost.

◆ STC (2nd ed.) 14600.5; *ESTCS*112182. Bound as above, rebacked preserving original spine; leather cracked, edges and extremities rubbed, clasps now lost, hinges (inside) reinforced some time ago. Institutionally rubber-stamped on lower closed page edges, front pastedown, and first contents page. Title-page provided in early pen and ink facsimile, with inscription as above; last text page with commentary on the book's age, dated 1724 and 1913. Early inked underlining and marks of emphasis throughout; occasional marginalia, two pages dealing with women and the Church having extensive annotations. Pp. 675/76 lacking. One leaf with tear from upper margin extending into three lines of text, without loss; one leaf with large chip from lower margin, not affecting text. Scattered spots of staining only — a clean, strong volume. (24511)

Enlightenment Catholicism — A Librarian's Perspective

Muratori, Lodovico Antonio. Della pubblica felicità oggetto de' buoni principi. Lucca: 1749. 8vo (18.8 cm, 7.375"). [6] ff., 236 pp. $400.00

◆ Ludovico Antonio Muratori (1672–1750) was a priest active in parish ministry, librarian to the Duke of Modena, and a brilliant scholar in many fields, best noted for his discovery of the oldest known canon, or list of books, of the New Testament (now known as the Muratorian Canon). In this work on the public good and the role of rulers in achieving it, he covers all aspects of human society, from politics to agriculture, exhibiting the combination of deep orthodox Christian faith and respect for freedom of science and scholarship that made him the chief representative of 18th-century “enlightened Catholicism.” First published 1749; this is the second edition.

◆ Goldsmiths' Kress 8390. On Muratori, see: New Catholic Encyclopedia, X, 81. Contemporary vellum over paste boards with remnants of gilt label on spine; soiled, stained, and chipped with loss of top layer of vellum on rear cover and part of spine. ◆ Anthony Panizzi, principal librarian of the British Museum, struggled mightily in the catalogue preparations described herein, due partially to prejudice against his Italian origins and partially to inefficiency and interference by the trustees. ◆ Bartolomeo Platina (born Bartolomeo Sacchi; 1421–81) was a leading member of the humanist community at Rome and Vatican librarian, acclaimed as the author of the first printed cookbook, De honesta voluptate. His Lives of the Popes, which originally appeared in 1475 under the title Liber de vita Christi ac omnium pontificum, went through numerous editions and was for quite some time the standard papal history, despite its often critical assessment of the Roman Pontiffs. This is the third edition of the version prepared by the great Augustinian scholar Onofrio Panvinio, and incorporates the first edition of Panvinio's Chronicon ecclesiasticum (see below).

The text is ornamented with woodcut initials and occasional head- and tailpieces. Panvinio's De ritu sepeliendi mortuos, De stationibus urbis Romae, and Chronicon ecclesiasticum are appended at the back (as issued), and have separate title-pages and pagination.
