West, Andrew Fleming. Roman autobiography. Particularly Augustine's Confessions. [New York]: The De Vinne Press, 1901. 8vo. [4 (2 blank)], 26, [2 (blank)] pp.; 1 plt.

$30.00

• Delivered at Yale University and repeated at Princeton University in February, 1901. In a footnote on p. 1 the author explains, “In this lecture I desire to bring out collaterally three facts which have not received recognition in histories of literature: first, that autobiography is unknown in classical Greek literature; second, that it is a native form of Latin literature; and third, that both types of autobiography, the objective and the introspective, originated in Latin literature. A fourth fact, little noticed, is that “autobiography” is evidently a word of recent coinage, and probably not yet a century old.”

• Sewn, in original wrappers; soiled and a bit tattered along edges. Very good. (6113)

Wilson, Woodrow; Ford, Henry J.; Lloyd, Henry D.; & others. Problems in modern democracy. Course I: Booklovers Reading Club hand-book. Philadelphia: Press of the Booklovers Library, (1901). 8vo. 123, [3 (blank)] pp.; 1 plt.

- ❖ The ex-president argues in favor of U.S. entry into the League of Nations. Quoted on the title-page: "This is not a partisan question. We should be for or against the League of Nations without regard to whether we think it will bring credit to our party or credit to any man. Personal and partisan considerations of this kind are reasons which should have no influence with us in determining an issue so fateful in the world's history and so likely to affect the future welfare of the people of the United States and of all mankind. The question is, will the League do good for this country or mankind? If it will, let's favor it."
